MATRIMONIAL.

LAPSLEY-MCCLINTOCK.

The marriage of Dr. F. L. Lapsley and Miss Mayme B. McClintock was celebrated at the second Presbyterian Church, in this city, yesterday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends of the popular couple. Promptly at the hour announced the ushers, Dr. M. H. Dailey, F. P. Lowry, Dr. Wm. K. Dudley and C. A. McMillan, proceeded down the aisle, followed by the beautiful bride upon the arm of her sister, Miss Etna McClintock, the maid of honor, being met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Dr. C. G. Daugherty. While the ceremony was being solemnly said by Rev. Dr. E. H. Rutherford, the sweet strains of "Call me Thine Own" was played by Miss Frances Johnson, the accomplished organist. As the party entered the church Lohengrin's wedding march was played and as they left Mendelssohn.

The bride looked lovely gowned in a cream silk aolienne, white lace and pearl trimmings.

The pretty maid of honor was gowned in pastel lavender poplin, trimmed in lace applique.

Both the bride and maid of honor, wore white pail velvet and meline hats, trimmed in big white roses, and each carried fluffy bunches of white chrysanthemums.

The church was beautifully and tastefully decorated with and palms.

The couple left on 3:30 train for an Eastern trip, and expect to return about November 6th.

JORDAN-MURRAY.

The marriage of Mr. John H. Jordan, of this city, and Miss Cecelia Theresa Murray, of Lexington, was solemnized Wednesday morning, at 8 o'clock, at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Lexington, the Rev. Father James P. Barry performing the ceremony. The bride looked handsome in a stylish traveling gown of brown cloth with hat to match and carried a bunch of white roses. The attendants were Messrs. Thomas Murray, H. E. McGovern, John McCarthy and James McLaughlin. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a trip to the St. Louis Exposition and other points. The bride is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Margaret Murray, of Lexington, and the bridegroom a popular young business man of this city.

SWANGO-MANN.

Mr. R. H. Swango and Miss Fannie H. Mann were married at the home of the bride, on Pleasant Street, Wednesday afternoon, at 5 o'clock. Elder Carey Morgan was the officiating minister. The bride is the oldest daughter of Judge and Mrs. Russell Mann, and is a most estimable young woman. The groom is one of the proprietors of Swango Springs and a prominent young business man of his county. The wedding was a quiet affair and a great surprise to the many friends of the young lady in Paris. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. They left on the evening train for Swango Springs, their future home.

BRANNON-MINTER.

Mr. E. H. Brannon and Miss Mary C. Minter were married on Wednesday afternoon, at 8 o'clock, at the Catholic Church, parsonage, by the Rev. Father E. A. Burke. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. B. Minter, and a very popular and most excellent young woman. The groom is a son of the late Mr. John Brannon. He is a successful young business man whose friends are numbered by the hundreds. They left immediately for Cincinnati, and will probably go from there to the St. Louis Exposition. We wish them a happy and prosperous sojourn through life.

JOHNSON-BURGIE.

Mr. Garfield Johnson and Miss Annie Simpson M. Burgie, both of Clark county, were married Wednesday at the home of the bride in Winchester, Rev. Walker Sheerer, the Baptist minister officiating. The happy couple were in our city for a few hours en route to Millersburg to spend a few days with the groom's sister. From there they will go to the World's Fair. They were accompanied by Mr. S. T. Hall, a prominent farmer of Clark, a friend of the groom.

FOXWORTHY-TURNER.

Mr. Boyd Clifton Foxworthy, of Mt. Carmel, and Miss Mary N. Turner, of this city, were married, Wednesday, at the Phoenix Hotel, Lexington, the Rev. G. W. Young, of Georgetown, performing the ceremony. Miss Turner is a sister of Mrs. Chas. P. Cook, of this city, and is a handsome and lovely young woman. Mr. Foxworthy is the junior partner in the wholesale firm of Sausley & Co., of Mt. Carmel, and a popular young man in his home county.

SHADE TREES AT A BARGAIN.

I have ready for Fall planting 1,200 nice thrifty maples now standing in my nursery on the farm of the Misses Marsh, near Paris. They range in size from 1/4 to 1 1/2 inches in diameter; in height from 6 to 10 feet; some of them 12 feet. Will sell them at prices ranging from 10 to 25 cents each—the last named price for trees over 10 feet high. In orders of 10 or over a discount of 20 per cent. will be given.

If shade trees of other varieties are wanted, I am prepared to furnish them from other reliable nurseries at like reasonable prices. Also, all other kinds of nursery stock.

Planting of all kinds of nursery stock except strawberries can be done with perfect safety any time from this date till the 10th of December, provided the ground is not hard frozen, nor too wet to plow.

Nursery Delivery.

I announce to my friends and patrons that I will make a delivery of nursery stock at Centerville Nov. 2nd, Paris Nov. 10th, Millersburg Nov. 16th, North Middletown Nov. 19th. All who have given me their orders will please be prompt to attend these deliveries on the dates given and be ready with the money to pay for their orders. To patrons living remote from either of these places I will deliver their bills from the wagon at their residences. At each place of delivery I will have a choice lot of surplus stock brought there expressly for the purpose of sale.

All persons wanting shade or fruit trees, grapes or berry stocks of any description, roses, flowering shrubs or ornamental vines, pie plant or asparagus roots, are invited to come, inspect my goods, and buy what they need. My prices are reasonable.

A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 35c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boesche's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup; so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 35c; large size 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

HIS PHANTOM FOES

Adm. Rojestvensky Mistook the Fishing Ships For Torpedo Boats and Fired.

RUSSIA'S REPLY UNSATISFACTORY

British War Vessels at Gibraltar Have Been Ordered Ready For Sea at a Moment's Notice.

The Czar's Baltic Squadron Is Expected to Pass Through the Straits on the Way to Suez, and May Be Stopped.

Madrid, Oct. 27.—A telegram from Vigo to the Correspondencia says:

"Officers of the Russian squadron give the following explanation of the North Sea incident: While steaming by night they saw two torpedo boats within the lines of the squadron. Supposing a Japanese attack was impending, they opened fire. They say they did not see any sailors looking like fishermen aboard the two boats fired at. The officers say they do not know if any members of the crew were wounded. They express regret at the occurrence."

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 27.—A representative of the press succeeded in obtaining an interview with Adm. Rojestvensky, who expressed great regret over the North Sea incident.

The admiral stated that the unfortunate occurrence was purely accidental. The weather on the night in question was rather hazy. About 1 a. m. two torpedo boats, which the Russians supposed were Japanese craft, suddenly appeared between the two divisions of the squadron and seemed to discharge torpedoes. The Russians immediately opened fire. They saw no fishermen, and were not aware that any damage had been done. Evidently, the admiral said, the fishermen had shown no lights. The admiral reported that he greatly regretted that any injury had been done to fishermen and added that he had no doubt the Russian government would make ample compensation.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 27.—It is learned that three Russian warships have anchored in Arosa bay. The government has refused them permission to coal in Spanish waters. The Spanish warships Marques de la Victoria and Vasco Nunez de Balboa are keeping watch along the coast. The authorities have ordered that all fishing boats shall fly the national flag in order to avoid a repetition of the Dogger bank incident.

London, Oct. 27.—There is no sign as to when Adm. Rojestvensky's report will be made public, but if unofficial reports should turn out to reflect the admiral's official report, it is evident the Russian officers made an extraordinary blunder in mistaking trawlers for torpedo boats and fired on their phantom foes. This astonishing explanation is regarded here as not fitting with the state of panic suggested as having prevailed among the officers of the Baltic fleet, and in that case, it is suggested, the Russian government should find no difficulty in removing and punishing the officers responsible.

The newspapers Thursday morning evince more heat and impatience than heretofore at Russia's delay, which is considered absolutely indefensible in the present circumstances.

Ambassador Benckendorff's tentative communication to Foreign Minister Lansdowne Wednesday and the fact that this was regarded as unsatisfactory only served to inflame the public mind; and while official circles are giving intimations that it is their confident belief the whole matter will be satisfactorily arranged, it is now quite evident that only a short time will be allowed Russia in which to give final and complete assurances of her intention to comply with any and all demands Great Britain may make within reason.

Gibraltar, Oct. 27.—The battleships Victorious, Illustrious and Majestic (flagship of Vice Adm. Beresford) and the cruisers Lancaster, Theseus and Endymion, are under orders to sail on the morning of October 28. It is reported that the purpose is to shadow the Russian Baltic squadron, which is expected to go by way of the Cape of Good Hope.

The Russian Baltic squadron's cruisers and torpedo boats are expected to pass through the Straits of Gibraltar on the way to Suez. The whole of the Gibraltar torpedo flotilla has been commissioned.

The ships of the channel fleet have filled their bunkers with coal and replenished their ammunition and other stores and will be ready for sea at a moment's notice. The battleship Hannibal and the cruiser Doris are watching the straits closely. There is great activity at the dock yard, where men are working night and day. The admiralty is making inquiries concerning the coal available here.

American Meat For Russia.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 27.—D. H. McMullen, a Tacoma, Wash., lumber man who arrived here Wednesday from Omaha says that the order for 3,000,000 pounds of meat received by an Omaha packing company was given by the Russian government.

Russian Collier at Brest.

Brest, France, Oct. 27.—The Russian collier Kniaz Gortschakoff is still anchored in the roadstead awaiting orders. Her commander has been strictly forbidden to communicate with shore or to receive visits.

BOTH ARMIES ENTRENCHING.

No Resumption of Fighting of a General Character.

New York, Oct. 25.—There has been no resumption of fighting of a general character on the Shakh river. Both Russians and Japanese are entrenching their positions. The outposts are within 700 yards of each other and less than four miles separates the main armies. A scarcity of fuel is causing the soldiers to suffer greatly since cold weather set in. St. Petersburg has information that the Japanese army confronting Gen. Kuropatkin is receiving heavy reinforcements from the Port Arthur army and direct from Japan.

London, Oct. 26.—Under date of October 22 the Port Arthur correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, describing the defenses of that place, says the Japanese will achieve a wonderful success if they can capture the fortress with a loss under 30,000 men, for the garrison, though worn down and few in numbers, can hold their strong defenses with no great daily casualties from the bombardment of the heaviest ordnance, and that the Japanese must sacrifice numbers to gain even the advanced defenses, which are as strong as forts. This dispatch reached the Daily Telegraph by way of Yinkow.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 26.—A Harbin dispatch states that Viceroy Alexieff published an imperial decree appointing Gen. Kuropatkin commander-in-chief of all land forces in the east and retaining Alexieff in the post of viceroy.

Mukden, Oct. 27.—The appointment of Gen. Kuropatkin as commander-in-chief was received with universal approval. It will greatly facilitate the military operations. A Japanese attack is now expected shortly. The Russian batteries continue to harass the Japanese. Otherwise all is quiet. The Japanese dead recently found showed by their warm clothing that the Japanese are prepared for a winter campaign, whereas the Russians have not received their winter outfits.

SUDDENLY SUMMONED.

Cornelius Van Cott, Postmaster of New York, Dies of Heart Failure.

New York, Oct. 26.—Cornelius Van Cott, postmaster of New York city, died suddenly Tuesday afternoon of heart failure, following a sharp attack of acute nervous indigestion. He was taken ill Monday afternoon at his office in the Federal building and his condition was such that the attending physician deemed his removal unwise at that time. Tuesday noon Mr. Van Cott appeared much better and was taken to his home in West 86th street. He walked to the elevator in the Federal building without difficulty and his physician believed that the postmaster was merely suffering from an attack similar to several he had had during the past year. A consultation of physicians was held as soon as Mr. Van Cott reached his home and they gave a favorable prognosis, provided apoplexy did not supervene. Shortly afterward, however, the patient had a sinking spell and died at 3:25 o'clock of heart failure.

He was postmaster of New York during President Harrison's administration and was appointed again by President McKinley in 1897.

Rev. R. Heber Newton, of New York city, president of the federation, made the leading address on "The Significance of the New Thought Movement."

WILLIAM HARPER ARRESTED.

He Is Wanted in Chattanooga, Tenn., On a Murder Charge.

St. Louis, Oct. 21.—William Harper, alias Hall, alias Hennings, who, it is alleged, is wanted in Chattanooga, Tenn., for murder, was arrested by detectives late Wednesday night in a rooming house. He will be held here pending word from the Tennessee authorities. When the officers entered the room Harper drew a revolver, but was disarmed before he could fire a shot.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

We are authorized to announce Lee R. Penn as a candidate for Magistrate from Clintonville precinct, subject to the action of the Democratic primary, November 15.

Utterances of a Great Man.

The following are extracts from the speech of Wm. Jennings Bryan at Louisville: "Sometimes they ask me if it would not be a good time now for me to retaliate on the gold Democrats for what they did to me. My friends, I wouldn't be worthy of the loyal support that I have received if I didn't have a higher purpose in life than to get even with anybody for what he does to me. There is something more important to me than getting even with men who have been against me. My great desire is to get even with the men who have been for me and to do something for them that I can do."

"You ask how I, a silver man, can vote for Parker, a gold man. My friends, weighed in the balance against human rights, against constitutional liberty, against the Declaration of Independence, the money question seems insignificant and trivial. I am not willing to contribute to it. If Parker will help us to rid this country of those things he will deserve well of his country."

"I tried four years ago with the help of many of you to save this country from imperialism, but there were some men who were afraid to help because they were afraid our financial system might be disturbed. Now you have a chance to save your republic without disturbing your financial system."

"He has tried to teach the black man that the post-office was the only door of hope. He ought to have taught the black man what we tried to teach the white man, that it is more important that he shall have intellect and brain and heart and character than that he shall hold any office within the gift of the people. He has held out before him unsubstantial social equality. The solution of the race question is not in intermingling in society, nor in the intermingling in marriage, and I believe that Roosevelt could have done the black race a thousand times more good if instead of suggesting the possibility of moving in white society he had taught the young men of the colored race to try to so raise their race that they can create a society of their own that will meet all the requirements of an intelligent, loyal people. I am not willing to risk four more years of a race issue intensified as it has been intensified."

A Good Lunch Set.

Go to the Central Bar for your lunch. Pigs feet, hot sour kraut, country boiled ham in sandwiches, and the best of draught and bottle beers. (38-7c) TONY PREIFFER.

UP-TO-DATE GROCERY.—If you want anything in the grocery line call at Wm. Sauer's grocery on Main street. You can find at all times fresh vegetables, all kinds of fruit, kraut, mackerel, mince meat, sorghum and everything to be found in a first-class grocery. (35-2c)

Until After Court Day.

I will be at my old stand on Main street almost giving my stock away until after Court Day. Avail yourself of this forced sale. JOE JOSSERSON.

This May Explain The Apathy.

There is no denying that the campaign in this State lacks the spirit of former contests. There is the boom of oratorical great guns from every stump; the newspapers are beating the tom-tom and sounding the he-w-gage; some weeping is being done over the enslaved Filipinos; and much wailing over the depredations of the cruel Trusts; but it is all of no avail. The populace refuse to get excited. They are going about daily tasks in a lethargic way, either the result of a too full dinner pail, or an overdose of politics. In any event they are contented and serene, and while a dose of dynamite might scatter and shatter them it would not disturb them.

This is the natural sequence of the feverish fights of 1896 and 1900. Those were strenuous years. The democrats worshipped William Jennings Bryan. They found in his attractive personality, his torrential eloquence; his brave battle, single-handed, against the hosts of error and plutocracy all the qualities of inspired leadership, and they followed him with an enthusiasm that had its basis in a sublime faith, and that drew its fires from a genuine affection. It takes an age to produce such a man, and no matter how capable and worthy his successor may be, it is not possible to give to him that self-sacrificing devotion which the true Democrats gave to Bryan.

They are, however, loyal to Judge Parker. They recognize in him the highest type of a statesman, and while they may not grant to him the qualities that Bryan seemed to possess above all other men, they will vote and work for him. The wild fervor of 1896 and 1900 has been supplanted by determination to by-gones be by-gones, with the resolute purpose to restore Kentucky to its proud place in the galaxy of sure democratic states.

Killing At Winchester.

Allen Brown, city clerk of Ford, shot and killed Pleasant Wilder in a saloon at Winchester Tuesday. The men had not been on good terms. Brown asked Wilder to have a drink, and was repulsed. Wilder drew a big knife and started for Brown, who fired three shots, all of which took effect, two of the balls piercing the heart. The coroner's jury declared Brown's act justifiable, and he was released on $500 bond.

A Small Blaze.

On Tuesday night, about 7:30, the planing mill of the Paris Manufacturing Company was discovered to be on fire, but by prompt service given by the Fire Department was extinguished in a little while with a loss of $100, fully covered by insurance. The fire originated from a hot box in the emery wheel.

PARTIES seeking toothsome dainties should call at the Sugar Bowl, next to the Fair, where Edwin Grubbs has opened up a handsome store. See his ad in this issue.

Lexington Won.

After a hard fight between the Lexington and Henderson delegations for the location of the Knights of Pythias' Widows' and Orphans' Home, Lexington won, when the question was brought to a vote in the session of the Grand Lodge Knight of Pythias at Franklin Wednesday night. The Gibson property was chosen of several available sites at Lexington.

Colored Mail Carriers.

Paris will soon have free mail delivery, and at the same time three colored mail carriers, if reports from some of the officials are correct. A list of six names have been sent to Postmaster Sweeney for him to select from. Four out of the six are negroes, having received the highest marks in the civil service examination, and if the Postmaster goes according to the law in the case, we understand the negroes will receive the places over the white applicants. This will be a bitter pill for the efficient and capable young men who applied for these positions. It will also cause trouble for the whites of our city do not want them. We are informed that the negroes are all school-teachers, one of them now teaching at good salary in our Colored City School. This will be but a sample of what the Republican party forces on the Southern people.

Acquitted and Re-arrested.

The examining trial of Wm. N. Clark upon the charge of being accessory to the murder and robbery of J. W. Burden, near Millersburg, last week, was held before Judge H. C. Smith Wednesday and the defendant acquitted. A motion for another warrant was then argued before Judge Smith and sustained. Another warrant against Clark was then issued and he was re-arrested, and taken to jail until his examining trial Saturday morning at 9:30. The negro, Wm. Howard, who was under arrest for being accessory with Clark, and who claims Clark killed Burden, waived his examining trial and was held to the Circuit Court without bond.

Col. Hugh Anderson Hurt.

Col. Hugh Anderson, of Georgetown, on Wednesday evening, was in the office of the Wellington Hotel, at that place, reading an intensely interesting article in a newspaper with his chair leaning against the wall, and he failed to note that his chair was tipped a bit too much. It suddenly slipped from under him, his head striking the wall and his body doubling over the knob of the steam radiator. Upon examination by Dr. Coffman it was found that one rib was broken and another fracture. He suffered considerable pain for a time but is reported to be getting along nicely. Col. Anderson is the father of Mrs. John Stuart Roberts, of this city.

Fine Series of Sermons.

The Carlisle Mercury says: "The meeting which was in progress at the Methodist church for two weeks, closed Sunday night. Rev. J. L. Clark, of Paris, who conducted the services, greatly endeared himself to all who heard his excellent sermons. The members of the church were edified and the public greatly benefited. No better series of sermons have been delivered here in years, and they will be remembered for some time. There were sixteen additions to the church, and all will be formally received next Sunday morning."

Run Out of Tar.

The work on Main street was progressing nicely when, on Wednesday, the Contractors out of tar and had to shut down. It is said that three car loads are on the way from Indianapolis, but it seems they cannot be located. The way the work on the street has been delayed by these bituminous people is certainly not good for the street for if the heavy transfer wagons run many more days over the concrete foundation it will be in need of another layer.

Installation of New Pastor.

The services of the installation of Rev. Joseph S. Malone as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Paris, will be held Tuesday evening, November 1st, at seven o'clock. Rev. R. O. Kirkwood, of Lexington, will preach the sermon. Rev. E. H. Rutherford, D. D., will give the charge to the pastor. Rev. W. C. Condit, D. D., will deliver the charge to the congregation. A cordial invitation to be present is extended to everyone.

Reunion of Orphan Brigade.

Ex-Confederates and friends should not forget the 20th reunion of the Orphan Brigade will be held at Frankfort on the 8th of November, and at that time a monument erected to the honor of Ed. Porter Thompson, will be dedicated. All ex-Confederates, sons of Veterans, Daughters of the Confederacy and friends are invited. Reduced rates on all railroads.

The right style in suits and rain coats at Frank & Co's.

Appointments Cancelled.

The Democratic Campaign Committee for Bourbon has canceled all public speaking appointments made by it. The State Campaign Committee having made the date for Judge J. C. Morris, of LaGrange, Ky., he will speak in Paris on Monday, November 7, at 1:30 p. m. Everybody invited.

Why Is It?

Why is it that the lobby of the Paris post office is filled with pictures of Theodore Roosevelt, Republican candidate for president, and various other Republican campaign literature, when the Government says most positively that no advertising matter of any kind shall be displayed in any post office lobby.

A VISION.

She slipped across the doorstep
A being of light and bloom,
Bright as the noonday whiteness
That flooded my quiet room.
Slim and rosy and dimpled
She stood beside the door,
And I looked and greatly wondered
Had I seen the child before.

Back in my heart's far corner
A faint sweet fragrance stirred,
As the little one kept gazing,
Saying never a word.
Her eyes were blue as heaven,
Sun-tinted was her hair,
Quaint as an old-time picture
She stood, and blossom-fair.

A little red frock was on her,
An apron white and frilled.
I sprang from my chair to greet her,
My soul with ardor thrilled.
But lo! the vision vanished.
I looked through empty space
Where the doorway had been shining
In the beauty of her face.

Then swiftly I remembered—
Though many a mile and long
Has been the path I've traveled
From the land of morning song—
That little red frock and apron,
Those fearless eyes were mine,
When childhood's rare enchantment
Made common things divine.

'Tis a far cry to the garden
Where the Eden roses blow;
But if we have had its freedom
In the beautiful long ago,
Still in the cloistered stillness
Of our lives the angels talk,
Still, with the Lord of angels
There are days when we fearless walk.

Lost on the world's wide desert,
Shall I find the child again?
Is she somewhere safe and waiting
Beyond the world of men?
When I reach life's latest way-mark,
And face life's latest day,
Shall the eyes I lift to heaven
Be brave as a child's at play?
—Margaret E. Bangster, in Chicago Interior.

The Hermit

A Story of the Wilderness.

By CHARLES CLARK MUNN
Author of "Focket Island," "Uncle Terry" and "Rockhaven."

(Copyright, 1904, by Lee and Shepard.)

Martin also arose.
"Be calm, dear Angie," he said, "be calm. It is blessed news I am trying to tell you. That poor old hermit is—your father."

For one moment she gazed at Martin with wide-open, terrified eyes, the next on her knees with her head in Aunt Comfort's lap, sobbing.

Then came Aunt Comfort's heart-burst, and all the years of her kindly patient life of love and hope were condensed into few words. For with hands upraised and eyes closed she whispered, "O God, I thank Thee for this blessed news and all Thy goodness. O God, I thank Thee!" And then she, too, was sobbing.

Martin turned away with misty eyes. He had heard prayers, but never one that touched his heart like this.

It was all over in less time than the telling, yet a lifelong drama was enacted in those few moments, and when Angie arose again—her face wet with tears and eyes still brimming—she looked glorified. She could not speak, but two hands were extended to Martin, and as he clasped them, the long ago of first love and the now of stronger love were joined.

"I can't thank you now, dear friend," she said, brokenly, "but I shall, never fear, I shall."

It was midnight ere they parted; when she again stood before the open fireplace where only white ashes remained, and glanced at the tall clock, she heard not its solemn voice, for a new life, a new joy, and a wondrously blessed hope had come to her.

CHAPTER XXXVII.
A CONFESSION.

Martin's first return and wooing of Angie naturally interested all Greenville, but the news of his discovery of the long-lost Amzi was, as he expected, a veritable bombshell. No one except Aunt Comfort and Angie learned of it until the next day, and then Dr. Sol, so to speak, was the one to sound the alarm. And no medicine he ever gave had quite such an electrical effect. Men driving on the highway were halted by others and told; women scurried across fields to neighbors' houses bareheaded to carry the news; Squire Phinney's store became a local point where dozens gathered to hear the joyful tidings told and retold again and again, and Angie, on her way to school, had to give up and tarry for congratulations. And so cordial were they, so warm a spot did she hold in Greenville's heart, that women insisted on embracing and kissing her in the street, and when she finally reached the schoolhouse, one of the committee was there awaiting her and declared the school closed for that day. She had walked there as her duty called, but she rode home, the cynosure of all eyes along the way, with most of her pupils following.

Martin also received an ovation wherever he went, and when he halted to describe the hermit home of Amzi, and tell the tale over and over again, as perforce he had to, men left their work, and women and children their houses, to gather close and listen. He was really the hero of the hour, and his efforts to save Angie her heritage—now known to all—his wisdom in not even hinting his suspicions of who the hermit was until proved true, and forethought in taking old Cy into the wilderness to care for him, were all a matter of comment.

By night the public sentiment had crystallized into a general invitation to all to meet in the town hall, and listen to Martin's telling his story in coherent order and in full. He rather laughingly consented, and for an hour held the unique gathering spellbound. At its close Parson Jones was called upon, as might be expected, and uttered a fervent prayer of thankfulness, and in it ascribing Martin's intuitions and actions, as a pertinent example of divine interposition, and when amen was reached, called upon all to join in "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

It was rendered with unusual fervency, while Aunt Comfort wiped her tears away, and when the audience dispersed, Martin walked home with her. Angie was not present, for she was in a state of almost mental collapse and for ample reason.

Collectively it was an exhibition of public sentiment and kindly feeling, the like of which could nowhere else be found. Greenville had for many long years felt that a blemish rested upon it, and, like poor dog Tray, realized the stigma David Curtis was responsible for. He had met a just and well-merited fate, and the general belief was that conscience had driven him insane. Angie, well beloved, had come into her rights, and at the hands of a long-faithful lover, who now hoped to become a citizen of that village. Aunt Comfort, too, was in a fair way to receive due reward for her unflinching charity and general benevolence, and all in all—though slightly bigoted—Greenville stood ready, like the rest of humanity, to applaud and reward all goodness and condemn all vice.

But there was another, and to Martin even more interesting, conclusion yet to be settled, and alone in Aunt Comfort's warm sitting room that night they discussed it. What it was need not be specified, but at the close of Martin's plea for Angie's consent and speedy marriage, although she permitted his arm-clasp, she shook her head.

"No, no," she said, "not yet. Once you left me without thought or care, and now let us try being lovers again. I was forced to try to put you out of my mind and heart once, and I wouldn't care to live through another such experience."

"Beyond that, I have Aunt Comfort, and no love can set aside my duty to her. She has been my mother since a child, I am all there is in life for her, and her care and happiness is sacred and must be to me so long as I live. You have brought to me also another duty, and that, my poor father, I shall not rest, or feel a moment's content, until he is here and under my care. You tell me he is almost demented, but contented where he is, yet he is very old, and to let him remain and die in that miserable abode is out of the question. I would start and walk to where he is, if it were possible, and he must be brought here before I shall know a moment's peace."

In vain Martin pleaded that marriage would be no bar to this double claim; her duty must and would be his as well, and that Aunt Comfort would be the happier for this consummation. It was futile, for all his specious pleadings and promises availed not. Duty to those already dependent upon her for happiness was her guiding star and watchword, and Martin had to yield and accept it.

She even refused to be considered as engaged, and her reasons for it are worth quoting.

"A verbal bond has no strength," she said, "unless reason wills and the heart wishes. If you need me and I you for life, that need must hold us until death, or it is worthless and a delusion. Promises can neither add to, or injure it, and be it one week, one year, or a lifetime hence, it must hold and remain the same divine obligation. Beyond that, I shall value a faith and fidelity, given without asking, and bound by no promise, a thousand times more than all the vows uttered by mortal lips. I did not ask Aunt Comfort to care for me a helpless child and not her own; she gave me home and love without it. She would not ask me to sacrifice one hour for her selfish needs, and yet I am ready, and shall if need be, to devote all my life solely for her in return. This and this only is true and unselfish love, and all that is worth the name."

Then they changed the subject into a discussion of ways and means to rescue her father from his wilderness abode.

"He has, so far as I could discover, forgotten his early life," asserted Martin, "and while he seemed disturbed and in a way almost touched by the sight of your pictured face, acted as if the past was a blank in memory." Old Cy he recalled well enough. In fact—and it was curious—his coming there appeared to strike him as perfectly natural, and in a few days they became like two old schoolboys playing at keeping house. I'll wager at this very moment they are content and talking about their traps, the squirrels, and how thick the ice is on the lake, or how deep the snow is. They once were natural-born companions in outdoor sports and such ways of living, and now are joined enjoying the same again. I took old Cy along solely to identify this hermit, but builded wiser than I knew, and it turned out more than fortunate. I was also so sure I had found Amzi that I took in extra clothing for him, and before I left, sent our guides to a settlement for more provisions and needful articles. It was by one of them that I sent you that birch-bark letter, for I was without even a pencil. We also repaired and improved the cabin; built an addition for the guide I left there for emergencies; they have meat and food supplies for a year, and when spring comes, I'll take you and Aunt Comfort to pay them a visit. To go there now is impossible, except to a hardy woodsman on snowshoes, for the only highways are locked by ice in that high latitude, and snow is likely to be a foot or more deep. I thought of all a man could to make your poor father safe and comfortable, and believe he is. I will do anything you ask, will take you and Aunt Comfort there when possible, and then you must judge what is best to be done. If old Cy's companionship has the effect I hope it will on him, he may be changed into a more normal state of mind, and ready and even anxious to return to civilization. The long years of solitary life have made him almost demented, however, and nearly obliterated even the memory of you."

Much more—already known—was related by Martin, and when the evening ended, a few words of defense for her own resolution were uttered by Angie, and must also be quoted.

"You have rendered my poor father and myself," she said, "a service for which all you ask of me is no more than just reward. Some day it shall be yours. And now as partial payment I will tell you what has never passed my lips, and God's truth."

"Once and when a silly girl I grew into a strangely sweet illusion. I did not know what it meant then, but blindly believed it must last for life, and that you would seem and be ever the same to me. It was selfish, as first love always is, but I did not know it. Now I do, and that the only love worth calling such means self-sacrifice. Then you went away, and I tried to forget you. It was useless, for none can force thought or feeling either to come or to go. For years I suffered as all fondly foolish girls must, and in silence. It was like the Saviour's cross to me, and I helpless to escape its burden. In time and by trying to assume others' burdens, my own seemed lighter. I have never complained, for it was useless. I could not will you back if I tried, and the only peace I found was in living for Aunt Comfort and my pupils. At first I hoped you might return some day, but finally forced that hope away. Other men and good ones tried to whisper love to me. It made no difference, for I felt no response. I certainly would have done so, if I could, but I could not. It seemed to me God had willed me to live my life alone and for others, and even now I feel the same. Your finding my father, your unaccountable impulse to return here, then going back to him again are all a part of my fate. I may be wrong, but I can no more escape my sense of duty, and that it is God's will you should bring me this added one, than I could put you out of my heart long ago. My duty now seems first, and when that is performed, and no one needs me more than you, I will be yours until death parts us. I could not do otherwise if I would, and I would not if I could."

And when he parted from her, never before had he believed one woman could seem so priceless.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.
THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thanksgiving had always been the most important day in Aunt Comfort's calendar, and latterly the one most anticipated by Nezer. For many weeks previous to its advent he began to count the days ere it was due, and when preparations came, he was not only a boy ready and willing to do all that was asked, but one who seemed to be hunting for chores and chances to assist. First came the selection of the fattest turkey in the flock a few days ahead, and his cooping and extra feeding in due preparation for the grand event. In this occult matter Nezer displayed almost abnormal acumen, and could tell by the bird's strut and how he held his wings which one to choose. Chickens must also be selected and shut up, and here again Nezer's night visit to the roost and choice of fowls showed discretion. The yellowest ripe pumpkin was picked out from the pile by him, and all manner of smaller vegetables as well. He cheerfully carried a big basket of good things to old Cy and others, and poor families a mile away for Aunt Comfort; he made no complaint at chopping wood, and when the big oven over the fireplace must be cleaned out, he was anxious to do it. By the time the all-important morning arrived he had reached a state of almost delirious excitement, and was usually underfoot all the time while watching the women folks preparing tarts and jellies and filling the many kinds of pies, to be deftly transferred to the deep oven on a long-handled shovel. To keep him quiet he was allowed to help, and Angie usually put an apron on him and set him paring apples or chopping mince-meat.

When preparations were well on and Aunt Comfort, who never forgot to go to church, hurried away for the brief service, then Nezer's expectancy reached its critical stage, and not even a circus coming into town would have tempted him out of the house. If company came, his excitement was increased, and so keen was his anticipation that his best clothes were donned with cheerful resignation. The only rift within the lute of his perfect joy was having to wait so long and when the banquet was served, to be the last to receive his portion. He made amends, however, in quantity, for his plate had to be passed up three times, and he usually found room for two pieces of mince pie besides.

When the joyful day came again, both Aunt Comfort and Angie set about making it memorable, and invited a gathering that was likely to crowd their home to its limit. First, Dr. Sol and his wife, and Martin, of course, then his mother, sister and her family, consisting of her husband and three children, from Riverton, as well. Then Aunt Lorey, whose ability to assist at and enjoy such an affair was even superior to her utility at funerals, was included.

"I don't know where we can put all Martin's family to sleep," asserted Angie, somewhat ruefully, when she and Aunt Comfort began counting their guests. "The out-of-town people will need four rooms, and we have only two spare ones furnished."

"We won't worry 'bout such trifles," Aunt Comfort responded; "we kin double up somehow, and Nezer kin sleep on the settle."

She had set about a celebration that was one, and the matter of crowding was a trifle of no account, and the event was one the like of which her ancient dwelling had not held since the joyous days of her youth. For three days the women folks were more than busy, and the store of good things provided seemed limitless. Twice the big oven had to be heated to bake all the pies, and again to hold the two turkeys and tempting spare rib, and Nezer's nose was nearly blistered while basting them. Martin obtained permission to add his mite, and he sent to the city for flowers enough to turn the whole house into a bower, and had Aunt Comfort know what they cost, she would have fainted. It mattered not to him, however, for he was in that state of mind when money seemed like the dry leaves of autumn compared to Angie's happiness.

Nezer was almost beside himself with joy when the supreme day arrived, but when the somewhat cified Riverton party drove up and two pert and pretty girls about his own age alighted with the rest, he, for perhaps the second time in his life, felt scared.

Of the introductions, hand-shakings and genteel efforts to make everybody feel at home and happy, nothing need be said.

Dr. Sol and family soon joined the party, and when formality had merged into the happy-go-lucky cheerfulness of such an occasion and the banquet was served, no pen can describe its all-around enjoyment or hilarity.

Tender and True.

Squire Benson was often consulted in cases of family difficulty resulting from the storm and stress of time or temper, and he derived a good deal of amusement from the tales told in his little office. "Is it true that you threw something at Mike that caused the swelling over his eye?" the squire asked a little wiry Irishwoman who appeared sobbing at his door one day half an hour after her husband had departed. "Yis, I did," said the little woman, catching her breath, "but I niver want to hurt him, and he knows it well. We'd just come home from me cousin's wedding, an' I was feeling kind of soft to Mike, and I axed him if he loved me as much as he did the day we was married; and—and he was so slow answering me that I up wid the mop an' flung it at him, Squire Benson; for if we poor women don't have love our hearts just breaks inside of us!"—Youth's Companion.

Our Forefathers.

A little storm-tossed vessel cast its anchor off the barren shores of Cape Cod, on the twenty-first day of November, 1620, at the point that is now Provincetown Harbor. On board were 72 men and women, with brave hearts and fixed purpose, and 30 children. Their intention was to go further south and their grant of land was made out for a point near the Hudson, but the voyage had been long and boisterous and the captain of the ship had grown tired of the expedition and was anxious to be rid of his crew; so he stopped here and refused to go further. As a flight of birds determined Columbus' destination, so an irritable captain gave to New England the honor of being the home of our forefathers.—From "The Nation's Corner-Stone," by Mary L. Kane, in Four-Track News.

Last Day of the Stoddards.

When Poe's name was mentioned Richard Henry Stoddard was likely to become irascible and explosive, and he often related with keen zest how Emerson had characterized Poe as "The Jingle Man." When Stoddard was a budding poet, Poe on one occasion doubted the originality of one of his poems, called him a liar, and threatened to throw him down the editorial stairs. Hence Stoddard's lack of enthusiasm about Poe. "No," he said one day, "I will not be quoted about Poe. Every time I have described Poe as he actually was when I knew him, I have brought down upon my head a torrent of abuse. He was a scamp and a deadbeat, and I know of few who, writing so little, wrote so much that was bad."—Reader Magazine.

Cell for Prison Committee.

At the New England Methodist Conference held in Springfield, Mass., recently, a good brother wished to announce a meeting of the committee on prisons. The committee was to meet in one of the classrooms, which were numbered. Full of his work and with mind intent on the business which was to be considered the brother arose and announced: "The committee on prisons will meet in cell No. 1 immediately after dinner."—N. Y. TWO
DISCOVERIES

By C. SEWELL

"I'm always wondering," remarked Elva, reflectively, as she handed me my second cup of tea, "when you're really going to fall in love, and—"

"Don't be too hasty," I interrupted, as I assisted myself to sugar; "perhaps I'm even now consumed with the disquieting fever."

"You're so fat," said Elva, disparagingly.

"Nonsense!" I protested. "Simply well covered. Why, my tailor altered my measurements only yesterday!"

"Oh, of course, if you won't be serious," she sighed, resignedly, and pre-emptively nibbled a judiciously browned muffin; "but really, Monty, you're—let me see—40—you're independent, and—"

"—she regarded me critically with her head on one side—"passably good looking; and yet you let pretty, nice, available girls slip through your fingers by dozens, because you're either too lazy or too conceited to take sufficient interest in them."

"Don't lecture me," I pleaded—Elva is prone to lectures; "you're so dreadfully impulsive, you know. As a matter of fact I looked in this very afternoon on purpose to tell you how—how abominably in love I am!"

Something in my tone must have struck her as unusual. The muffin, like Mahomet's coffin, remained suspended as she surveyed me intently, presuming to see if she could detect any latent humor in my countenance.

"I did not move a muscle."

"If I were quite certain that you were earnest," she began, hesitatingly, and thought—though, of course, I had no business to think—that her voice was a little unsteady, "I should say how very glad I am."

"Please try and believe me," I pleaded. She studied my face as if undecided what to do.

"Is it recent?" she asked at last. "It happened—yesterday," I confessed. "You remember, I always promised that you should be the first to know whenever I really had anything to tell, and I was just going to begin when you fell upon me."

"Yesterday?" murmured Elva, in evident surprise. "Then it must have been at Lady Follet's garden party."

I nodded.

"Was it love at first sight, or had you seen her before?"

"I had seen her," I said, guardedly, once or twice.

"Oh!" said Elva, and I think she blushed. "Then, of course, it's Mollie Richards. I saw you talking to her over ages in the rosary. She's a nice girl, I believe, and I'm really awfully glad, Monty—awfully." Somehow her words didn't carry the conviction that I presumed to be because Miss Richards was over a very particular friend of hers.

"I suppose," she went on, "you'll promise at once. You're not need to wait the most poor creatures."

"I intend," I said, firmly, "to offer myself with as little delay as possible." "And you really don't mind my taking the privilege of an old friend—a very old friend—to ask you all these questions, do you?"

"Not the least in the world," I said, anxiously. I expected them."

"What do you mean by that?" she inquired, with suspicion.

Nothing, except that you're catenased about my matrimonial prospects ever since you could toddle. Do remember, for instance, asking me a schoolroom tea in your early youth when it was my intention to marry a Jewin or not?"

Elva's face brightened promptly. "Father!" she said; "and fraulein told me all sorts of colors, and told her the next day that she would longer stay with a child so embarrassing. I really think she had a tenpence for you, Monty."

"Probably," I agreed. "Many people don't be conceited," reprimanded Elva; "but tell me all about Mollie Richards, and exactly what attracted some people call her pretty. I—her admire her myself, only—"

"Mollie Richards?" I inquired, with some innocence. "Who said anything about Mollie Richards?"

"Why, you did, of course, that is to say—yes—no, I suppose you didn't, then, I did, I suppose; but anyhow it's the good of cavilling about her?"

"Mollie Richards, isn't it?"

"I wouldn't marry Mollie Richards," said, decisively, "if they shot me for being!"

Elva poured herself out some more and—yes, it was not my imagination—her hand did shake, and she seemed as if it would have been a relief to her feelings to have launched the shot at my head.

"Monty, you are trying," she exclaimed; "upon my word you are! You say that you've come to tell me, as your best friend, that you've really found one that you could care for at last, and then you sit and twist your face and make me guess all the things people, and—"

"Never made you guess anyone," I indignantly, removing my hand from my upper lip with a jerk. "I merely informed you that I fell in love yesterday. I suppose there's no objection to that? And when you suggested that happened at Lady Follet's, I agreed."

"Well," said Elva, in a judicial tone, "you didn't stay more than three-quarters of an hour. Directly you arrived I took me to see the aviary, and the rest of the time you spent in the rosary with Mollie Richards."

"I'd known you were watching my movements so carefully—" I began.

Elva blushed furiously.

"When people make themselves conspicuous," she said, frostily, "their doings are bound to form the subject of comment. Mollie Richards always persists in wearing maize with her particular shade of red-ash-blond hair, and—I could see her from all over the garden."

"Almost without looking?" I suggested, carelessly.

Elva passed over this remark with contempt, but I couldn't help noticing that the flush deepened.

"Well, as it's not Mollie," she observed with dignity, "and as you've called on purpose, perhaps you'll be obliging enough to tell me who it is, so that I may congratulate or condone with you, as the case may be."

"You'll condone," said I, with conviction.

"Why, please?"

"Because she—this girl, who isn't Mollie Richards, you know, doesn't care a straw for me—in that way, and the whole thing is hopeless."

Elva softened instantly.

"How can you tell if you've never asked her?" she demanded. "She may be simply pining away for your sake, if you only knew"—her gaze wandered through the window and settled on a bed of brilliant begonias in the front garden—"girls don't always wear their hearts on their sleeves, even in these matter-of-fact days, Monty."

I raised my eyes. They had been busily engaged in tracing the pattern of the carpet.

"Do you think it's likely," I asked, "that any girl would really fall in love with a man twice her age, if—"

"Oh, she's young," interrupted Elva, hastily. "Do you know, I'm rather glad of that."

I held up a deprecating hand.

"Please let me finish," I implored. "Twice her age, when she's tyrannized over him, teased him and looked upon him as an old fogey for the greater part of her natural life?"

Elva eyed me sharply. The color came and went in her cheeks in a way that I had never seen it before. I put my eyeglass in order to better admire the effect.

"You said you'd seen her only once or twice," she resumed, severely; but the quiver in her voice robbed the severity of any sting.

I waved my hand.

"Lovers' license!" I said, airily. "I couldn't divulge everything at once."

"If you've known her so long, how comes it that you only—well—discovered the state of your feelings yesterday?"

"There is a tide in the affairs of men," I quoted. "Likewise, there is a psychological moment when a man suddenly realizes a fact that may have been staring him in the face for years."

"And that psychological moment occurred at Lady Follet's?"

"Occurred at Lady Follet's," I echoed. And then there was a long silence.

I let my eyes wander slowly round the room. They lingered vaguely on the ridiculous blue cats with which Elva adorns her mantelpiece, and skimmed the photographs of her numerous admirers—some of them thrust carelessly into the overmantel, and some, the more fortunate, smiling at me from elaborate frames.

I think Elva's eyes must have been wandering, too, for they came to anchor at the same moment as mine, and then, without any rhyme or reason, they filled quite suddenly with tears.

Now I can never see a woman cry without feeling that something—something drastic must be done at once.

I started up, and then the rest seemed to follow as a natural and easy consequence.

In less time than it takes to chronicle, Elva was crying quietly on my shoulder, and the blue cats were grinning diabolically from their several coigns of vantage.

"And when," I asked, after we had become more or less normal, and returned to earth once again, "when was your psychological moment, Elva?"

Elva fingered a gardenia in my buttonhole—took it out—smelt it, and replaced it carefully.

"When you pretended—I mean, when I thought you were pretending, and that it was Mollie Richards, you know," she said, incoherently.

And the blue cats grinned more than ever, as much as to say: "We know something about human nature, though we are only china."—Free Lance.

BAMBOO BLOOM DISASTER.

Chinese Believe That the Budding Season Brings Dreadful Misfortunes.

In some parts of China the natives are in dread of the bloom of the bamboo, at which season all kinds of dreadful disasters are predicted and confidently looked for. Like some other superstitions this one has a slight foundation. The fact is that the bamboo only flowers once and then dies, and as a rule the whole lot of plants, often covering large areas, bloom together.

The reason of this is that the individuals of a species are commonly gregarious, and all are of the same age, having taken simultaneous possession of ground rendered vacant perhaps by a similar depopulation.

A somewhat analogous case is presented by some of the Strobilanths of tropical Asia. These plants live about seven years, then all burst out into a glorious mass of blue flowers and then die away, leaving it may be, hundreds of acres of ground destitute of the luxuriant vegetation it previously supported.

Human Trait of Rodents.

It is said that rats may be driven from the premises by the playing of bagpipes. Rats, says the Chicago Journal, have a great many human traits, after all.

ENGLISH HOTEL BRUSHES.

Manufacturer Provides Them by the Year and Renovates Them Every Week.

A statement of the business practice of a Birmingham manufacturer of a line of high-grade brushes, hair and nail, in dealing with English hotels, may serve as a useful suggestion to American manufacturers and dealers in that line. This manufacturer contracts with English hotels for nominal sums, probably just about or nearly paying his actual expenses, to furnish the hotels with hair, nail and clothes brushes. The hotel pay a fixed sum by the year, and also pay for lost brushes, which often means stolen ones. The brush manufacturer furnishes a double set of brushes for each washstand and at the end of each week takes away the brushes which have been in use and gives them a thorough sanitary cleaning. The brushes, which have been softened by the lavatory attendants daily washing them, are replaced, and the brushes are generally repaired, refinished or revarnished, a second set being left in the place of those undergoing repair. The manufacturer places on them with a very neat wire-tack lettering his name and address and the name of the hotel.

The result is that the hotel is always able to provide its patrons with hair and nail brushes which are a credit to the establishment, and the manufacturer's brushes are so admirable that he obtains a splendid advertisement. It has been a surprise to me, however, that a manufacturer who was clever enough to introduce this advertising system should not have made an arrangement with the hotels or retail dealers by which a glass case containing brushes, etc., would be placed in the lavatories and the attendant allowed to sell them. Occasionally this manufacturer sells his "advertising rights" on the brushes, and in one case the proprietor of a well-known hair restorer had a neat advertisement on them.

DOMESTIC HELP IN ITALY.

Hard to Get Because Women Prefer to Push Carts or Carry Burdens.

The question of domestic help has been one of vital interest in the United States for more than a quarter of a century, and the people there are under the impression that in Europe the supply of such help is greater than the demand, and that it may be had at very low wages, but such is not the situation in Turin. I have known parties to look for domestic help for weeks in vain. The wages paid for "hired girls" vary from three dollars to six dollars and even ten dollars a month. The price is governed by the employee's skill and merits and the wealth of the employer. Here, as in the United States, intelligent and ambitious young women seek employment as teachers, as clerks in post offices and stores, as secretaries, stenographers, typewriters, in factories—in fact, they seem to prefer any kind of employment to domestic work. It seems that they even prefer to drive teams, to pull or push carts on the streets, or to become porters, to being domestic servants.

Some time since I had occasion to go to Perno, a small village at the head of a valley in the Alpine regions. There being no wagon road to within five miles of the village, all necessities except a few vegetables have to be carried, mostly from Omegna, a distance of ten miles. In my walk to Perno and back I frequently met women with large baskets on their backs, strapped to each shoulder, and I saw that the baskets were filled with provisions, merchandise, and even little kegs filled with wine. I also noticed that the "royal mail" was thus carried. This carrying is given to the lowest bidders, and as women are willing to work cheaper than men, they have a monopoly of the carrying business and men have been driven to find employment in other lines.

Commercial Licenses in Hungary.

The Hungarian ministry of commerce has decided that as Hungarian citizens require no commercial travelers' licenses to collect commercial orders in Hungary, but only in countries like Austria and Germany, where the local laws and special conventions made in 1890-1903 require them, American citizens require no commercial travelers' licenses in Hungary. American commercial travelers in Hungary (including Croatia-Slavonia) require, therefore, only passports, vises, if desired, by the American consular officer in Buda-Pesth or Fiume.

FRANK DYER CHESTER.

Machines for Japanese Homes.

Because of the enlistment of large numbers of Japanese workmen in the armies operating in Manchuria, many women are forced to sustain themselves by means of industrial work in their homes. This has created a large demand for the lighter kinds of machines which produce salable commodities and can be manipulated by women. Sewing machines, knitting machines, and hand looms are reported to be in great demand.

J. F. MONAGHAN.

Oysters Do Not Transmit Disease.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, of August 1, 1904, contains correspondence from Paris stating that last year a veritable campaign was waged against oysters, which were said to especially transmit typhus and various other bacilli. The Journal Officiel now publishes the report of Prof. Alfred Glard, in the name of the sea fishery commission appointed by the secretary of the navy, which clears the oyster of all charges, and expressly declares that they are eatable at all seasons, as they cannot transmit any disease to human beings.

RICHARD GUENTHER.

GOING TO STAY YOUNG.

Even Government Inspectors Couldn't Make Her Older Than She Looked.

A Brooklyn woman lately returned from Europe was describing to her husband who had remained at home her experiences with the customs inspectors who had taken her declaration in the cabin of the liner coming up the bay, relates the Brooklyn Eagle.

"When he asked me my age," she said, "I told him 30."

"But, my dear," exclaimed the husband, "you're over 30."

"I know it," she returned, "but do I look more?"

"No, you don't; that's a fact."

"Well," she concluded, triumphantly, convinced that mere man was squelched once more by the force of feminine logic, "until I look more than 30 I'm going to be 30, and I don't care for the old United States government and all its customs inspectors and declarations. They can't make me older than I look or want to be."

Six Doctors Failed.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 24 (Special).—After suffering from Kidney Disease for three years, after taking treatment from six different doctors without getting relief, Mr. J. O. Laudeman, of this place, found not only relief but a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Speaking of his cure, Mr. Laudeman says: "Yes, I suffered from Kidney Trouble for three years and tried six doctors to no good. Then I took just two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they not only cured my kidneys, but gave me better health in general. Of course I recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to others and I know a number now who are using them with good results."

Mr. Laudeman's case is not an exception. Thousands give similar experiences. For there never yet was a case of Kidney Trouble from Backache to Bright's Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills could not cure. They are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease.

A VOICE FROM THE PULPIT.

Rev. Jacob D. Van Doren, of 57 Sixth street, Fond Du Lac, Wis., Presbyterian clergyman, says: "I had attacks of kidney disorders which kept me in the house for days at a time, unable to do anything. What I suffered can hardly be told. Complications set in, the particulars of which I will be pleased to give in a personal interview to any one who requires information. This I can conscientiously say, Doan's Kidney Pills caused a general improvement in my health. They brought great relief by lessening the pain and correcting the action of the kidney secretions."

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"YOUNG WOMEN:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, as each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstrual periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Painful Periods

are quickly and permanently overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The above letter is only one of hundreds of thousands which prove this statement to be a fact. Menstruation is a severe strain on a woman's vitality, and if it is painful something is wrong. Don't take narcotics to deaden the pain, but remove the cause—perhaps it is caused by irregularity or womb displacements, or the development of a tumor. Whatever it is, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is guaranteed to cure it.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

Details of Another Case.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and carelessness is the cause of most of the sufferings of women. I believe that if we properly understood the laws of health we would all be well, but if the sick women only knew the truth about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they would be saved much suffering and would soon be cured."

"I used it for five months for a local difficulty which had troubled me for years, and for which I had spent hundreds of dollars in the vain endeavor to rectify. My life forces were being sapped, and I was daily losing my vitality."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me completely, and I am now enjoying the best of health, and am most grateful, and only too pleased to endorse such a great remedy."—Miss JENNIE L. EDWARDS, 604 H St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women.

W. L. DOUGLAS

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world. The reason W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the greatest sellers in the world is because of their excellent style, easy fitting and superior wearing qualities. If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makes and the high-grade leathers used, you would understand why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, better wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoe on the market to-day, and why the sales for the year ending July 1, 1904, were $6,203,040.00.

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it—take no substitute. Sold by shoe dealers everywhere.

SUPERIOR IN FIT, COMFORT AND WEAR.

"I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the last twelve years with absolute satisfaction. I find them superior in fit, comfort and wear to others costing from $2.00 to $7.00."—J. S. McCall, Dept. Coll., U. S. Int. Revenue, Richmond, Va.

W. L. Douglas uses Corona Cattlehide in his $3.50 shoes. Corona Cattlehide is conceded to be the finest Patent Leather made. Fast Color Ejects used exclusively.

Makes a Clean Sweep.

There's nothing like doing a thing thoroughly. Of all the salves you ever heard of, Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best. It sweeps away and cures Burns, Sores, Bruises, Cuts, Boils, Ulcers, Skin Eruptions and Piles. It only costs 25c, and guaranteed to give satisfaction by Oberdorfer, the druggist.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver, of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Oberdorfer's drug store.

Sorely Afflicted

Mr. J. A. Walls, of Shelby county, has had a series of misfortunes recently. About a month ago his wife died after a protracted illness. Last Saturday his second son died, and on Monday his baby departed this life. Six of his other children are now in bed with typhoid fever, some of them critically ill.

The Modern Way.

Down in a Virginia town the aged pastor of one of the churches fell ill not long ago, according to the Washington Post. He was beloved by all the neighborhood, and a constant stream of anxious friends rang the bell to make inquiries. The nurse in charge was an intelligent negro woman and she decided to issue bulletins at frequent intervals. She wrote them, herself and pinned them to the front door, and this is the way they read as they appeared successively:

"Rev. Blank am very sick."
"Later—Rev. Blank am worse."
"Night—Rev. Blank is sinking."
"Morning—Rev. Blank am sunk."

Sheriff's Sale!

By virtue of Execution No. 630 directed to me which issued from the Clerk's Office of the Bourbon Circuit Court, in favor of Stoll & Hamilton against Moore & Peddicord, I will on Monday, November 7, 1904,

between the hours of 11 o'clock a. m., and 12 o'clock m., at the Court House door in Paris, Bourbon County, Ky., expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy Plaintiff's debt, interests and cost), to-wit:

The undivided remainder interest in fee simple of Stamps Moore in and to a tract of land now owned and occupied by Mrs. Sallie E. Moore during the period of her natural life, being the same land devised to Mrs. Sallie E. Moore and her children by Mrs. Neppie Patterson, deceased. The said land is situated about 3 1/2 miles from Paris, Ky., on the Paris & Cynthia Pike and extending through to Stoner Creek and is adjacent to the lands of Col. E. F. Clay and Mrs. Mollie Grimes. The interest to be sold is an undivided 1-9 interest in remainder subject to the life estate of Mrs. Sallie E. Moore and will be sold subject to a mortgage on said remainder interest in favor of E. F. Clay, Jr., amounting to $650, with interest from April 30th, 1903, levied upon as the property of Stamps Moore.

TERMS.—Sale will be made upon a credit of 3 months, the purchaser to execute bond with approved surety with six (6) per cent. annum from day of sale till paid.

Amount to be raised on day of sale about $385.

A Great Sensation.

There was a big sensation in Leesville, Ind., when W. H. Brown of that place, who was expected to die, had his life saved by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. He writes: "I endured insufferable agonies from Asthma but your New Discovery gave me immediate relief and soon thereafter effected a complete cure." Similar cures of Consumption, Pneumonia, Bronchitis and Grip are numerous. It's the peerless remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. Trial bottles free.
